N^o 6. Fragment of David's letter of free Roy from King's of Behram to father of Naria

Fragment of a manuscript in the Sogdian script, showing several lines of text. The script is highly stylized and appears to be a form of Old Persian or Sogdian. The fragment is torn and irregularly shaped, with some characters being partially obscured or missing. The text is written in a cursive style, with some characters resembling the Greek alphabet. The fragment is mounted on a piece of paper, and the text is visible through the paper.

Handwritten note:
line 15

Handwritten text in a cuneiform script, organized into horizontal lines. The script is dense and appears to be a form of ancient writing, possibly Sumerian or Akkadian. The text is written on a light-colored background, likely a tablet or parchment.

Handwritten notes in a modern script, likely a transcription or commentary on the cuneiform text. The notes are written in a cursive style and include some markings that correspond to the lines of the cuneiform text.

The image shows a page from the Voynich manuscript, featuring two columns of text written in the Voynich script. The script is composed of various symbols, including triangles, squares, and circles, arranged in horizontal lines. The page is numbered '10' in the top right corner. The text is written on aged, slightly discolored paper.

The image shows a single page from the Voynich manuscript, identified by the number '148' in the left margin. The page contains three staves of text, each consisting of a series of black, geometric symbols on a light-colored, aged parchment background. The symbols are arranged in a regular, repeating pattern across each staff, suggesting a structured or rhythmic form of communication. The symbols themselves are composed of simple geometric shapes like triangles, vertical lines, and horizontal bars, some of which are combined to form more complex, multi-part symbols. The overall appearance is that of a historical document, possibly a form of early shorthand or a completely new script.

Handwritten text in a stylized script, likely a form of shorthand or a specific dialect, arranged in approximately 12 horizontal lines.
